Peter Mansoor, Colonel, U.S. Army (Retired), is the General Raymond E. Mason, Jr. Chair of Military History and a CNN military analyst. He served a 26 year career in the U.S. Army that culminated in his service in Iraq as the executive officer to General David Petraeus during the period of the surge in 2007-2008. He has authored a history of this experience, Surge: My Journey with General David Petraeus and the Remaking of the Iraq War, which was a finalist for the inaugural Guggenheim-Lehrman Prize in Military History in 2013.

Ian Beckett is a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society, he has been Chairman of the Council of the Army Records Society since 2000, and is also Secretary to the Buckinghamshire Military Museum Trust. He is on the executive council of the Buckinghamshire Record Society, and is on the editorial boards of Insurgency, Counter-insurgency and National Security (Routledge), and The History of Military Occupation (University of Illinois Press). He has previously held chairs in both the UK and the US.

Aimee Fox-Godden is a lecturer at King’s College London. She completed her PhD at the University of Birmingham, and during her doctoral study was a Visiting Scholar at UNSW Canberra (ADFA). She also held scholarships with the Royal British Legion and the AWM. Dr Fox-Godden’s primary research interests focus on the British Army of the First World War, particularly in experiences in ‘side-show’ theatres. More broadly, she is interested in military administration, including planning and logistics, and military innovation. She is particularly interested in how the military accommodates and responds to change, along with the frictions associated with the movement of expertise and knowledge across organisational and geographical boundaries.

Elizabeth Greenhalgh is a graduate of the Victoria University of Manchester in the United Kingdom, and arrived in Australia in 1987. She worked as research assistant in the Department, then School, of History, UNSW @ ADFA and after completing her PhD edited the international journal War & Society between 2005 and 2010. She then became a full-time researcher, being awarded a UNSW postdoctoral fellowship and then an Australian Research Council Fellowship (2010-2014). She has published three books with Cambridge University Press on Franco-British relations and on the French Army during the First World War. Currently she is working on a study of France’s battles on the Western Front in 1915, and also on a study of how the Allies won the First World War.

Spencer Jones currently is a Senior Lecturer in Armed Forces and War Studies at the University of Wolverhampton. He is also the Regimental Historian for the Royal Regiment of Artillery. Dr Jones’ key works include the award-nominated From Boer War to World War: Tactical Reform of the British Army 1902 - 1914 and the edited collection Stemming the Tide: Officers and Leadership in the British Expeditionary Force 1914 which was runner-up for the 2013 Templer Medal. His most recent work, Courage without Glory: The British Army on the Western Front 1915 as been shortlisted for the British Army Book of the Year Award.

Adrian Threlfall is a lecturer at Victoria University and a member of the education team at Melbourne’s Shrine of Remembrance. He is the author of Jungle Warriors: From Tobruk to Kokoda and beyond, how the Australian Army became the world’s most deadly jungle fighting force.
Alexander Hill teaches at the University of Calgary. His main interests are in military history and the military and political history of Russia and the Soviet Union since 1914. His research is concerned primarily with Soviet military, naval and strategic history. He has written on the nature and military effectiveness of the Soviet partisan movement in north-west Russia, 1941-1944, and on the development of Soviet naval power in the Arctic up to the first months of the Great Patriotic War. Dr Hill is also an Assistant Editor of the Journal of Slavic Military Studies.

Daniel Marston is a Professor at the Australian National University and the Principal of the Military and Defence Studies Program at the Australian Command & Staff College in Canberra. His research focuses on the topic of transnational military culture and how armies learn and adapt to new environments. His first book Phoenix from the Ashes, an in-depth assessment of how the British/Indian Army turned defeat into victory in the Burma campaign of the Second World War, won the Field Marshal Templer Medal Book Prize in 2003. The second volume, The Indian Army and the End of the Raj, was Runner Up for the Templer Medal in 2014.

Sharon Tosi Lacey earned her Ph.D. in military history from the University of Leeds, and is also a graduate of the United States Military Academy and Long Island University. She has served as a U.S. Army officer for more than 22 years and published more than 30 articles on military issues in magazines and journals. She currently lives in Northern Virginia with her husband and four children.

Ashley Ekins is Head of the Military History Section at the Australian War Memorial. A graduate of the University of Adelaide, he specialises in the history of the First World War and the Vietnam War. He researched and wrote two volumes of the Official History of Australian Involvement in Southeast Asian Conflicts 1948-1975 on Australian ground operations in Vietnam: On the Offensive (co-authored with the late Dr Ian McNeill, published in 2003); and Fighting to the Finish (published in 2012).

Craig Stockings is the Official Historian of Australian Operations in Iraq, Afghanistan and East Timor. As a junior officer he served during the INTERFET deployment to East Timor in 1999-2000, followed by an appointment as the Aide-de-Camp to the Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia. His academic career has seen the publication of critically well regarded books on Army's history. Professor Stockings’ most recent book is Britannia’s Shield: Lieutenant-General Sir Edward Hutton and Late Victorian Imperial Defence. His role as Official Historian is now focusing on the INTERFET operation.

Richard Iron served for 37 years in the British Army, largely spent on operations in Northern Ireland, the Falkland Islands, the Balkans and Iraq. He instructed at the UK’s Joint Staff College and subsequently led development of British Army doctrine. He also deployed to the Coalition Land Component HQ in Kuwait in 2002-03, where he led a UK/US planning team. COL Iron was also responsible for the British Army's subsequent analysis of the Iraq War. He also led development of land doctrine in NATO for six years and was an expert military witness for the prosecution in the Sierra Leone War Crimes trials.

Ian Hope’s operational experiences include the first Gulf War in 1991, multiple tours in the Balkans, Africa, and Afghanistan, and domestic operations. He commanded the 1st Battalion Princess Patricia’s Canadian Light Infantry Battle Group (Task Force Orion) in combat in Kandahar in 2006, earning the Meritorious Service Cross. Colonel Hope is now serving on faculty at the NATO Defense College in Rome.

Jeffrey Record is a well-known defence policy critic and teaches strategy at the Air War College in Montgomery, Alabama. He served as a pacification advisor in the Mekong Delta during the Vietnam War and in a variety of policy analyst positions. Dr. Record also has also served as Legislative Assistant for National Security Affairs to Senators Sam Nunn and Lloyd Bentsen, and later as a Professional Staff Member of the Senate Armed Services Committee. He is the author of eight books and over a dozen monographs, and was the Australian Army’s Keogh Chair in 2016.